Member in the Spotlight... Karen Warfel

Hometown: Tampa, FL  I have lived in Florida all my life. I was born in Tampa and moved away when I was ten years old. I lived in Orlando and Jacksonville before going off to college at Florida State University where I met my husband Rick. We moved back to the Tampa area 17 years ago.

When did you join Suncoast Fly Fishers? I officially joined in early 2011 with a family membership but did not actively participate until after I retired in December later that year.

What is your favorite game fish to catch on the fly and why? The most fun I have had fly fishing is sight casting to dolphin. My husband and I go down to the Keys every year to fish offshore. Whenever we come across a piece of floating debris we stop to test the water for dolphin with a fly rod. Dolphin are a great fish on the fly. They take a fly readily and once hooked they jump and run hard. They can be real knuckle busters.

What are your top three places to fish? Locally I enjoy Weedon Island, Ft. DesSoto and our outings at the Skyway. The Hillsborough River is my favorite freshwater location. Farther from home I love fishing in the Keys and trout fishing in North Carolina.

What is your favorite fly rod and reel? My favorite rod and reel is a TFO Lefty Kreh TiCr X 9’ 8-wt. with a TFO BVK reel which I won in the raffle at the first Hog Roast I attended in 2012.

How and when did you get introduced to fly fishing? As a child, I remember my father and grandfather fly fishing. Although I’ve conventional-fished most of my life, I didn't really get started fly fishing until I became active with SFF.

Why do you like fly fishing compared to fishing with conventional tackle? There really is no comparison. Fly fishing is more challenging and more rewarding than any other type of fishing. Even if you are not catching fish, the process of fly fishing is enough to keep you engaged. If you do catch fish it is even better.
We had a great outing this past month at Walsingham Park. The fishing was moderately good -- Hey, Larry Morse caught a 15” bass! -- and the weather could not have been better. Lunch was great with sausages and a fine variety of desserts (compliments of Mary Ann Carmichael.)

Cliff Nigh, the third President of SFF, and Terry Kilpatrick, Project Healing Waters Fly Fishing (PHWFF) leader, were comparing their bamboo fly rods. They both build some handsome bamboo rods. Well, what do know but pretty soon they were casting and before long many members at the outing were slinging their bamboo rods, too. Ron Kelley and Rick Warfel threw some nice loops.

Bamboo rods gradually evolved from the early times when most of the fishing was with a rigid pole. As more flexible woods were used bamboo became the choice wood. The finest wood was bamboo and the highest grade bamboo came from a small province in China even though it’s called Tonkin cane. The cane is split, treated and hand planed. Selected strips are glued together forming a six sided (hex) tapered rod. There are also some 4 sided (quad) and 5 sided (penta) rods. They are exquisitely finished with a variety of reel seats, ferrules, guides, glues, and varnishes. There are some two hundred hand operations (95% hand labor). If you fish bamboo, you realize that it was a living thing. Yes, you can fish bamboo in saltwater. Bamboo rods are truly a work of art by a select group of craftsmen. And two of them are SFF members. What surprised me is the distance these rods can cast – 60 to 90+ feet.

It was great that Cliff and Terry shared with us their craft and skill. Maybe we can have a bamboo rod outing so start shopping for a fine bamboo rod.

Keynote speaker Macauley Lord talked about how his 14-pound inflatable float boat gives him the freedom to move about the world -- Argentina in December anyone? -- to fly fish most productive waters.

Capt. Dan Bumgarner won the door prize, Alan Sewell's hand-crafted 5 weight with Lamson reel. And it looks like his grandson Peter Smith now has a go-to outfit to use for a long time.

Bill Scarola outbid the room and took home NuCanoe's $1200 Frontier kayak plus a high-end graphite kayak paddle from Appalachian Outfitters.

Toni Fernstrom claims Carl Hanson's innovative saltwater fly originals. Toni wrote, "I have heard so many stories about Carl Hanson and this was the first time I ever saw flies tied by the man himself. The framed flies was an opportunity I just couldn't miss."

Alex Carmichael shows off his bidding prizes -- Bass Pro Shops’ White River’s Journeyman Fly Tying Station and Lefty Kreh Fly Tying Kit. Mary Ann seems pleased, too.

Tom Jones' framed Gyotaku print of a ladyfish was a very popular bidding item.

Charlie Most and Macauley Lord Re-Connect

Charlie and Mac, former L. L. Bean fly fishing colleagues, meet again at the 2015 Hog Roast and Silent Auction

By Charlie Most

I had retired from the Department of the Interior in Washington, D.C., and then worked in several fly fishing shops, including a stint with Orvis, in the Maryland - Virginia suburbs. That way, I could “hi-grade” shipments of fly tying materials as they arrived.

I then had a call from some employment outfit that said L.L. Bean was opening a new store in Tyson’s Corner, Virginia, and was looking for someone to handle the store’s fly fishing shop. This was the first store Bean’s had opened outside of Maine. I worked there for three years before getting fed up by the traffic congestion around the nation’s capital.

Rumors had gone around that the store would be setting up a fly fishing course in the Blue Ridge mountains about 50 miles to the west. We were participating in a fly fishing show nearby and Mac came over and introduced himself and then said he’d like me to make a few casts for him at the show’s casting pond. It sounded like an audition to me so I started casting and after two or three casts he said I could stop. Then he said, “Well, there isn’t anything I can do for you.” I replied that could be taken two ways and he said, “No, you’ll be helping teach at the new school.”

They sent me up to Bean’s headquarter in Freeport, Maine to monitor their fly fishing course. Then I helped Mac and another Bean employee from headquarters for five or six weekend courses over the next two years at a Izaak Walton League clubhouse with a big pond we could use for casting.

It was a lot of fun, but I finally got fed up over the congestion around D.C., and we put our house up for sale to move down here. A sad thing happened then. Bean’s has a close working relationship with Frontier, an outdoor destination travel outfit. I was offered a free salmon fishing trip to Iceland, but then we got a good offer for the house. I told my boss Roger I would be leaving and that he had a decision to make. He logically designated a young woman fly fisher who worked for me to go on the trip. I think he made the right decision but it still hurt. Win some; lose some.

Video Casting with Macauley Lord

Yep, There's an app for that.

By Tom Gadacz. Photos by Tom Gadacz, Chris O’Byrne and Leigh West

Macauley Lord, IFFF Certified Master Casting Instructor and the person who put L. L. Bean fly fishing on the map, held a video casting clinic at Picnic Island Park on February 27 and 28. Twenty-five participants learned how to use video recording and slow motion video analysis to study their casting style. Slow motion video analysis is used in many sports, especially golf and tennis, and has also been used to train Olympic bobsled teams.

Dayle Mazzarella and Pat Damico, IFFF Master Certified Casting Instructors, organized the event and helped with casting instructions.

We learned a new application for various recording devices including smart phones, pads, and tablets. The app most used was Ubersense. This app can be used in either Apple or Android devices.

Most participants came prepared with the app already loaded and ready to go. We paired up and alternated casting and videoing. Macauley had a very positive approach to teaching and included everyone in the discussion. He had us tell our partner what we wanted out of the session and then tell the group what our partner wanted, too.

We remained focused on what we were doing and how we were doing it. We learned how to use the app and also some of its drawing tools. It was neat seeing one's cast in slow motion. We learned how to position the caster and the recorder.

It was amazing to see what we needed to improve. We worked on keeping our loops tight by improving the speed of acceleration of our stroke, a straight-line rod tip path, and starting and stopping our stroke at the proper position. We also learned how to group together under the shelter and discuss video casting when the rain was pouring down (especially on Saturday) and then quickly get out on the field for casting and taking videos of our casting.

It all worked well and we now go forth with a new technique to help us analyze our casting form. It was a great session and exciting to apply a new technology to improve our casting. Most of us left confident of using slow motion video analysis to improve our fly casting.

Tom

Editor's note: On the next two pages Tom explains the advantages and the steps to take to use Ubersense or similar apps to improve your casting.
Tom Gadacz: How to Use Slow Motion Video Analysis to Improve Fly Casting Skills

Ubersense is an easy to use application for video devices which allows slow motion video analysis of any activity. Slow motion video analysis has been used for some time and usually requires highly specialized equipment and technical skills to analyze performance.

It is usually used by coaches to analyze performance by athletes to correct faults or improve techniques in performance. The slow motion analysis often detects the problem in technique that may not be evident in real time. Slow motion analysis has been used by Olympic teams to improve performance in bobsledding and has been shown to be more helpful than real time impressions. It is widely used in many sports such as tennis and golf. It has been used to compare side by side your tennis serve with that of a tennis pro.

What does this offer the fly fisher? A heck of a lot. Its recent application is for fly casting. You don’t need special equipment or specialized training. You can use your smart phone, pad, or tablet. You can analyze the loop of your line, the arch of your cast, the length of your casting stroke, the timing of your haul and much more. So where do you start?

There are several slow motion video apps available but we will use Ubersense as an example. The equipment you will need is a video recording device such as an iPad or Android tablet. Ubersense has separate apps for IOS and android devices. You can use phones, pads, or tablets that have video devices. If you have an IOS (Apple) device you need an iTunes account. If you have an android device use Google store. You need a recent IOS devise with version 4.2.1 or later and for android devices you need Android 4.3 or later.

What is the advantage of Ubersense and other such apps?
• Instant video recording and replay in high definition
• Analyze frame by frame play in several slow motion speeds
• Zoom and panoramic views
• Drawing tools of lines, circles, and angles
• Side by side comparisons
• Import video from a camera or an app such as Dropbox
• Share videos with other fly fishers and casting instructors

Some recording suggestions
The amount (time or space) of recording will be determined by the space (memory) on your device. You can store videos in the cloud or insert an SD card into your device to increase the memory. Usually, you'll want to limit each recording to two minutes or less or it will take extra time to optimize and save. The use of the software has some basic functions and you will need to play with the app to learn all the possibilities.

Using Ubersense
Once you load the app you will see a video camera with a white circle in the right upper corner. Touch the camera icon and it will turn on the camera and the image that will be recorded is on your screen.

To start recording touch the white circle with an inner red circle on the right middle of the screen. Framing what you want to record requires some preplanning which we will address later. Once the caster is framed record several casts by pressing the record button.

Watch the clock
Once you are in the recording mode you will see a clock at the top of the screen and on the middle right side a white circle with a red box. To stop the recording, press the red box. The session you just recorded will be represented by an icon in the bottom of the screen as will all subsequent recording sessions. You can continue recording additional sessions and each will be stored at the bottom of the screen. All the sessions will be stored in the Ubersonse app by date and time. You can label them any time.

Viewing your videos
To instantly view your videos touch one of the recorded icons at the bottom of the screen. A panel of videos will appear on the screen of recent and past recordings. They are usually identified by date and time of recording. Touch one of the icons and the video clip will appear on the screen. Along the bottom of the screen is the time and in the left lower corner is a triangle pointed to the right. Touch this triangle and the video starts. The triangle is replaced with two vertical bars. Touch this icon and the video stops. On the bottom left corner is the slow motion speed. Touch this area and you can select the speed of the play back (1/1 = full speed to 1/8 one eighth speed). You can advance to any part of the video by touching the rectangle with the time and white circle and moving it to the right or left.

To use the drawing tools go to the upper right corner to the icon that looks like a slanted pencil. Touch that icon and three colored boxes (red, yellow and green) appear. To the right of the colored boxes are the drawing tools (line, arrows, and circles). The line will be a line segment. The arrow will draw an arrow. If you need to change the direction of the arrow lift your finger and then touch the tip of the arrow and draw another arrow. Same for the circle. To draw an angle touch the lower middle icon with the angle shape and use it to determine the arch of you cast. To erase your drawings touch the eraser pad icon on the bottom far right of the drawing tools. A square will appear with “Erase All” and touch that to erase all drawings. There are many other things you can do and will discover by playing with the drawing tools. To delete, share, or export a video touch and hold on the selected video until the options appear.

Some framing tips.
It will be difficult to capture both the front and back cast at the same time, so record six or so forward casts and then six or so back casts. Use an orange fly line which will give the best visualization. The background is important to highlight the line. Video with a background of trees or bushes will give the best contrast to see the orange line. Chose a position distance where the caster is on the far left or right side of the screen so caster and the formation of the loop are visualized on the screen. The caster’s feet should be at the bottom of the screen. Set the position of the caster and the video recorder before you start filming. Have the caster do several casts to insure you’re getting a good view of the caster and the fly line. This will help prevent wasted recordings.

Another tip is not only to record your cast from the side but, but also, from other angles including the front and back. Make sure you have a friend if you record in front of or behind a caster.

The technical analyses are a much more substantial part of the video recording and require much more expertise. So have at it and improve your casting skills at an accelerated pace. Practice, practice, practice is still the best way to improve but practice correctly.

Lefty's Craft Fur Fly  Tied by Capt. Dan Bumgarner

This fly is a great fly for beginning tiers. It is called Lefty’s Craft Fur Shrimp. It was designed by Lefty Kreh as a bonefish fly. It has been a good producer on the grass flats for everything that eats shrimp. It is a very simple fly to tie using only two materials and three or four tying techniques and when finished it will catch fish.

I used bead chain eyes on this fly to make it a little lighter. It would be a lot of fun to explore the many possible variations that could be done to this fly and still be true to the basic design. That sounds like a great topic for another time.

Materials
Hook --- Mustad 34007  size 2 – 2/0
Tail --- Tan craft fur
Body --- under fur dubbing
Eyes --- dumbbell eyes or equivalent of your choice

Tying Sequence

Step 1 (left) Tie in thread behind hook eye and lay a thread base back to above the barb and then back to a position about an eighth of an inch from the eye of the hook. Apply Flexament to thread base.

Step 2 (right)
Attach a pair of medium dumbbell eyes and apply more cement. Select and prepare a craft fur tail that will be about one and one half times the hook length and tie it in on top of the hook behind the lead eyes. Add barring with a brown sharpie.

Step 3 (left) Form a dubbing loop at the base of the tail. Use the under fur left over from preparing the tail to sparsely fill the dubbing loop. Spin the loop good and tight and wrap forward crisscrossing around the eyes and tie off.

Step 4 (right)
Trim and whip finish then add a little head cement. Use a toothbrush or Velcro hooks to brush out the body.

Another cause of poor line layout

After spending two days with Macauley Lord and his staff of casting instructors, local casting enthusiasts wanting to improve their casting found a tool in Ubersense that really opened their eyes. Working in pairs, participants recorded each other false casting, shooting line, roll casting, double hauling, distance casting, and any other casting mode that they wanted to see. Casting instructors then reviewed the video at different speeds, and angles and, using methods learned thru the IFFF Casting Certification program, discussed and applied necessary solutions to the caster’s individual needs. Every participant brought home a video of themselves that they could reference. Group discussions and exchanging information made this a very enjoyable and fruitful event.

Thinking out of the Box with Bluegill Flies

David Putnam went to the Walsingham Lake outing in February with a secret weapon -- a propeller fly for bluegills that he invented the night before. It worked. Three bluegills told him so. Some members went fishless, it was reported. Not Putnam.

At the Hog Roast Mr. Bluegillflies, Layne (Smitty) Smith, showed me a new bluegill fly he has created using the little rubbery pieces on a bathtub toy. No furs nor feathers required. Smitty promises us the step-by-step for “tying” this fly.
Fishing Report: Catching with Pat Damico in Tierra Verde canals, flats.

By Tom Gadacz and Capt. Pat Damico

Finally the water is warming. It went from 61 degrees a week ago to 73 degrees on this day. An overcast day with no morning winds found us exploring areas close to Tierra Verde.

Tailing redfish were spotted at low tide so we waded to stalk these spooky creatures. Using a crab pattern, we cast to several tails and disturbances in the water. No luck trying to get their attention and no hookups.

When the tide came in we explored other areas as the wind picked up and the clouds remained. A few small ladyfish and spotted trout were little to show for covering several areas. After a brief lunch we drifted over several grass beds and finally began to catch. First, Pat caught several medium size trout and then we pulled in some ladyfish. FINALLY in a canal we caught fish. Several nice size (~17 inch trout) on brown/orange and pink/white Clousers. This was my record for a large spotted trout.

Pat tried a popper under the docks and on our last catch landed a nice jack. All in all it was a great day for catching but they made us work for it.

Fishing Report: Learning New Tricks 'n' Techniques

By Ken Hofmeister

Thanks to some very generous and supportive IFFF guides and casting instructors, Tom Gadacz and I were fishing Charlotte Harbor, Bull Bay, and Gasparilla Island in March.

We caught a few fish; but we caught more compulsion, enthusiasm, and passion for the fly fishing sport. Captain Al White and Dusty Sprague had volunteered trips at the IFFF Expo in 2010. Alas, I purchased them at auction but was unable to use them due to some medical issues. Both were patient and so Tom and I headed out for an adventure.

Though Al White had been fishing and guiding all his life, he was like a kid in his first ice cream store when he poled us up on a flat of tailing redfish. What a sight. And what passion, enthusiasm, and excitement from our guide.

He also introduced the idea of two fly fishers casting from the bow at one time. It worked--it also helped to have Tom being right-handed and me being left-handed.

Dusty, reminded me of the pleasure of a clean boat, organized fly box, correct leader, and the wisdom of having a spinning rod for the fisher not fly casting at the time.

We are so fortunate to have experienced watermen around us in the fine fellowship of fly fishers.

Incidentally, Al White is beginning a kayak transportation service from Englewood-Placido area to fishing grounds in Charlotte Harbor, including Bull Bay. What a great opportunity for us kayakers. He will point out the flies to use, the places to fish, and drop us off to do our best before picking us up in the afternoon. Prices sounded great and details will appear in the April newsletter.

Bob Morrison: How-To

Don’t spook the school

Fly placement is critical. With warmer weather, we intensify our efforts to catch the big one. At least that’s the plan. Tides are moving water, and bait fishes are moving right along with it. On the incoming tide gamefish herd baitfish and shrimp into tight groups, backed up against the shoreline. Watch for areas of this activity, and place your fly at the edges.

When casting to game fish in the grassy shallows, place your fly on the outside of the school or fish, away from the shoreline and in front of the school. If you hook a fish in this area, it will probably charge toward deeper water, away from the rest of the school. In this way the school will not be spooked, increasing your chances for hooking a second fish after you have released the first one.

Outgoing tide savvy. On the outgoing tide game fish will usually cluster at deep channels, holes, and sandbars, waiting for the moving water to bring the bait to them. Concentrate on these areas at dusk and dawn, especially around the full moon when tides are more pronounced. Finally, sea trout seem to go for surface flies on the outgoing, and all the more when your retrieve is fast, noisy, and splashy.

Watch those teeth. Got an old leather work glove that you’re not using? Cut off a finger sleeve, attach it to a zinger or clip it to your belt. When landing a fish, insert your index finger into the glove-sleeve, and put that finger into the fish’s mouth, clamping down on the outside of his jaw with your thumb. In this way you have complete control over your catch while you unhook him, protected from his teeth. Again, I’ll be using my old leather finger-sleeve this spring (just as soon as I find it).

Go get ’em, and good luck.

Bill AuCoin: Flyfisher Flyover

Hey, Washington DC bureaucrats and legislators, this is a reminder that there are saltwater anglers out here in coastal flyover country. We catch a few fish for the fun of it, and we keep a few here and there so we can enjoy fresh fish at home. We release what we don’t keep. Sometimes we don’t catch anything. We spend billions on boats, tackle, fuel and travel. Remember, when you put the clamps on recreational fish limits you shut down businesses. Yes. really. So keep this in mind when you write the fishery rules. Fishing is more than just commercial fishing. Got it?

And on this subject there is this news: Another major grass roots organization -- Recreational Fishing Alliance -- has endorsed the "Morris-Deal" framework for federal recognition of the financial contribution saltwater angling makes as legislators move toward a reauthorization of the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery and Conservation Act. Johnny Morris of Bass Pro Shops and Scott Deal of Maverick Boats are the namesakes of the Morris-Deal commission articulating the vision and generating angler energy for this new model of fishing legislation. This book belongs in your fishing library. Ken Schultz, fishing editor of Field & Steam for 30 years or so, has added new content to the ultimate how-to, where-to book of sportfishing -- The Complete Guide to North American Fishing. Ken is a long time personal friend and, I have learned, a former NYC banking colleague of our club’s Paul Sequira. This is the book we should all have in our fishing library. (Ken Schultz)

Vote for Tampa Bay -- Tampa Bay Estuary Program would like your input as TBEP revises its management plan for the first time in a decade. Your vote on various issues will help TBEP determine priorities for continuing its good work making our bay as good as it can be. It takes about five minutes. (TBEP Poll)

A salute to Project Healing Waters -- "MERRITT ISLAND, FLA. — Jason Redler patiently watched and encouraged Russ Marek as he slowly wrapped thread around a fish hook and feathers to craft a fishing fly. Redler is a volunteer instructor with Project Healing Waters, an organization that works to help in the physical and psychological rehabilitation of military veterans with disabilities from wars." Read the whole thing. (Bradenton Herald)

Straight Shooting -- Club member David Putnam has another article in Florida Sportsman magazine. This one deals with fly lines -- the good, the bad, and the ugly. Do you really need to spend $80 for fly line? Well, hmmm. The article is not online so if you're not a Florida Sportsman subscriber grab one at the grocery while the March issue is on the shelf. Also, check out David’s blog. (David Putnam Outdoors)

Assigning blame. And why didn’t you catch fish today? Was it the fly pattern you used? Your casting? Perhaps it was the wrong time of day? Capt. Pat Damicco writes about this in this comprehensive article about how to make your fly fishing experiences more productive...for a lifetime. (CapMel.com)
